Staying in your own home

Regaining your independence
Help with walking and mobility
Equipment to help at home
Gadgets to help you stay safe
Requesting an assessment
Personal Budgets & Direct Payments
Support in your home
Meals and meals services
Cooking for one
Community shopping service
Someone to speak on your behalf
Homeshare schemes
Young people in transition
What happens to my care when I move home?
Information your council keeps about you
Pet care
Floating Support
Finding somewhere to live
Maintaining or adapting your home
Care homes and continuing health care

You are here: Home / At home / Staying in your own home / Young people in transition

Young people in transition

What is transition?

Transition means change.

For children and young people with a disability, when we talk about transition we mean the change from being a teenager to being an adult, and from moving on from children’s care services to adult’s care services.

During this period young people can experience changes in lots of areas of their lives. These changes may include:-

- leaving education
- thinking about starting a job or work experience
- changes to their state benefits and finances
- moving into new accommodation
- changes to health and medical services
- changes in any social care support
- changes to personal relationships.

It’s a time when young people gain new rights and responsibilities. Transition can be an exciting time for young people, full of new opportunities. However it can also be a worrying time as young people move on from familiar people and places and face new challenges.

It is important that young people with disabilities and their parents and carers plan for transition.

How we plan support

- The Education, Health and Care Plan
- Your local transition service
- The 'Moving On' leaflet
- Your local transition team
- The support available in your local area
- Other information and advice